Board Adjusts a Family Row and Incidentally Takes a Peep Behind Scenes.

The county commissioners sat as : board of inquiry this morning and ad-justed a family row besides examining W. S. Clark of No. 7 Mortensen court and Alma C. Smith of 631 south State street on an order to show cause why they should not provide for their families. Both men were discharged on the promise that they would go to work and spend what they earned on their families. The wives and families of these men have been supported all winter by the county commissioners while Clark and Smith have been lying about the house doing nothing. Clark has worked a few days in the last month or two, but has squandered his wage for liquor. Clark voted at the last election when he was not a qualified elector of the city.

He admitted that he was induced to do so by "American" ward heelers who told him that it was all right and that he would be taken care of by the party Since the election he has called on Mayor John S. Bransford, he said, and that he was refused a position. Jake Raleigh, the street supervisor, he claims, also refused to employ him on the streets. Clark lived in Park City until last September. Smith has been out of work and has not tried very hard to secure employment this winter. Mrs. Smith has been a county charge part of the time, and Smith has derived some support through his family from the county. Since the election he has called on

PROSECUTION RESTS.

PROSECUTION RESTS.

The prosecution in the dynamiting cases rested at noon today, and Thursday morning the defendants, Fred Wilson and John Delaney, will have an inning. Delaney will begin his defense by putting on witnesses to testify as to his character and reputation. There was nothing materially new brought out at the session this morning, except that it was shown the explosions at the Hotel Utah on Dec. 29, were caused by "throwing" the dynamite rather than by "planting" it. Manager Jones and Foreman Quinlan both testified that a person standing at the east of the excevation could throw the dynamite to the points where the explosions occurred.

BURGLAR ARRAIGNED.

Edward Smith, charged with burglary, was arraigned this morning before Judge T. D. Lewis and pleaded not guilty. In the information he is charged with having entered room No. 320 in the Wellington hotel which was occupied by J. W. Grant on Nov. 2, 1909 and stealing some clothing and money.

WANTS A PLAIN DIVORCE.

Mrs. Arda Mae Miller seeks a divorce from her husband, Joseph Clifford Miller, on the ground of desertion in a complaint filed this morning in the Third district court. They were married in Denver on June 21, 1907. They moved to Salt Lake shortly after their marriage, according to the complaint, and have made this their home ever since. For the last year, Miller is charged with falling to provide properly for his wife and they are now living apart. There are no children mentioned in the complaint and Mrs. Miller only asks for a divorce without any alimony.

$500 stolen. On Jan. 16, Sunday night, police officers broke into a room in the American House on Commercial street, and arrested Jå J. Howard. F. E. McCarty and James Hunt. With the arrest the police recovered all of the Hanauer silverware.

On Jan. 23, the prisoners were released by the police department under the convenient system of "floaters," and a sentence of six months for vargrancy was hanging over their heads. Hunt did not leave town as did Howard and McCarthy and now Hunt is doing six months for vargrancy.

The release of the men has caused considerable comment and speculation, and the question has been repeatedly sked:

"Why were the men released?"

"Why were the men released?

It was generally ""

"Why were the men released?"
It was generally supposed that the men had been caught "with the goods," that they had confessed to the robbery and would be sent to the state prison, and when it became known they had been released, a great deal of surprise was occasioned.
This morning The News put the question to Chief Barlow:
"Were the men released, and if so why?" Chief Barlow replied: "The men were released, on floaters. The stories published to the effect that the men were caught while in the act of melting the silverware were incorrect. The silverware was not even found in their room. It was in the hall."
"Did not Mrs. Hanauer want to prosecute?"
"I ruses she did. Plenty of us want."

"I guess she did. Plenty of us want-ed to prosecute, but we simply did not have anything on the men and there-fore they were released."

We have occupied the latter position a long time, but now hope for something better."

Wife Entertaining Hilarious Strangers.

When Joseph Brown, a solicitor, came home one night unexpectedly last summer, he discovered his wife, Mrs. Concena Brown, her sister and two men lawring a glorious time. Without saying a word to them, he left the house and has never been back. In a suit filed this morning in the Third district court for divorce, he asks for the custody of their two children, Joseph, 4 years old, and Robert, 2 years old. They were married April 22, 1904.

Since Brown found his wife in the company of these men, he met her ones in front of a restaurant where she was working as a waitress. She assalled him, striking him in the face and scratching him. Brown says that she is not a fit person to have the custody of the children. The night that he came home and found her entertaining other men, he alleges that there were empty beer bottles scattered about the house and other evidence of dissipation and debauchery.

O. B. Madsen of the board of county commissioners of Weber county is among the dozen or more delegates sent down from Weber. "We are building a permanent roadway between the Boxelder line on the north and the Davis county line on the south," said Mr. Madsen this morning. "We expended $10,000 on this highway last year and hope soon to report its completion."

This morning's session was largely occupied with the cross examination of Mrs. Parsons' who was or the stand as yesterday's principal witness Attorney Hoppaugh had a merry time of it this morning in his battle of wits with the clever woman who was pitted against him in the witness chair. the morning with pale face, her white hair and otherwise quite elderly appearance being in striking contrast with the vigor of her mind and the ready-witted replies she made to the questions put to her. The defendant, will later come before the court seeking divorce upon the grounds alleged in his counterclaim.

Letters bearing the postmarks of foreign centers of gayety will play an important part in the story as it is unfolded in the court trial. Mr Parsons seems to be well supplied with letters which he seems sure will support many of his gravest charges. On the other hand, it is likely that a charge will be made that dates have been altered on some of these letters, that they are not genuine.

It developed that many times after Mrs. Parsons and the daughter that was to charm the nobles of high degree of the old world landed in the quarter of their conquests their money ran low. Repeated cablegrams to the heads of the house of Parsons were followed by remittances and then the word was received from the father when finances were running low and that some of the frills of their quest must be dispensed with. This was immensely displeasing to the absent mother and daughter.

CREED OF "OPEN SOUL."

CREED OF "OPEN SOUL."

CREED OF "OPEN SOUL."

It was at this juncture that the creed of the "open soul" got in its work. It would seem from the testimony, though it is very hazy througnout—it is even difficult for the barristers to see through this open soul proposition—that the daughter, through her association with those who promulgated the doctrine of the open soul had acquired the ability to foretell the future. In this way she learned that she was to receive some $37,000 from the mother of her own mother. This she confided to Mrs. Parsons and on the strength of the bequest which the open soul had told the daughter was to come, an advance was made by a banker to cover pressing demands. Then the story of how Duse, the great European actress, was insanely jealous of the talents of Miss Parsons was unfolded. Then of the d'Annunzio and Torraine duel. It was a romance as only an "open soul" could contrive. Mr. Parsons was extremely kind to his family, "on occasions," related the withese. She told of her unhappy life with her husband while in Colorado as only an "open soul" could contrive Mr. Parsons was extremely kind to his family, "on occasions," related the witness. She told of her unhappy lite with her husband while in Colorado Springs, Denver, Paris and many other places. At the times he was not kind, he was irritable and unbearable, and finally she came to have an abhorrence for him. She said that at times she felt it to be her duty to effect a reconciliation and that she thought after her daughter had acquired a husband of noble blood—for she had no particular liking for ordinary Americans—that she hoped they might once more live together and be happy once more. As Mrs. Parsons related her hopes of having a happy home once more, she broke forth into a deluge of tears and the emotion of the mother seemed to greatly burden the heart of the daughter, for her eyes grew red on their rims and then her dainty lace handkerchief came to he relief, preventing the overflow of her tears to her pink cheeks. Her counselor, Willard Hansen, asked her fishe thought a rest would be of any solves the convention of the restriction of any solves the reconstruction. Her counselor, Willard Hansen, asked her if she thought a rest would be of any solace to her perturbed feelings, and she declined the invitation and evi-denced a desire to have the matter pressed to a conclusion. Mrs. Parsons was followed by her daughter to the witness chair.

DAUGHTER TESTIFIES.

DAUGHTER TESTIFIES.

Miss Parsons was clad in somber black and as she ascended the steps leading to the chair she smiled on all about her with the same smile that was to enchant the titled gentry across the salty waves. She told of her trip to Paris with still a trace of her girlish delight in entering into the conquest that was to be almost like the storybook love affairs she had read about. She said that she had private tutors in French, Italian and literature, She was taught fencing, dancing and riding. She said that the object of her study along these several lines was not to prepare to earn a living, but that she might develop her great gift, which she admitted was literature. The daughter testified that though her father was in Paris for two months, he spent only four days with her and her mother in the gay French capital. Miss Parsons was on the stand at noon recess and was to be recalled this afternoon. Her testimony had not proceeded farenough to disclose more of the cult which Parisians designate as "Tamo ouvert." It is expected that the yearnings of her heart for a noble mate will form an interesting chapter in this afternoon's testimony.

ATHLETIC BANNQUET FRIDAY.

At the Commercial club Friday evening the alumni and friends of the University of Utah tender the annual banquet to the men who have fought the battles of the university of the gridiron, track, field, diamond and gym floor, the guests of honor being the football team, base-ball team, base-ball team, track team and other athletes who have contributed to the big array of points won for the school on the hill during the past year. The banquet formerly has been tendered only to the gridiron heroes, but this year the bars have been let down and all who have contributed to the athlete fame of the school have been invited to attend and hear their good deeds retold in toasts. The selection of the toastmaster has not been made, but preparations are being made by those having the affair in charge to make of it a feast for the soul as well as for the gastronomical diversion of the participants.

RAILROAD THIEF RUN DOWN.

Short Line Gets His Man.

Chief Special Agent Joseph Jones of the Oregon Short Line returned Tues-day from Sacramento, where he was day from Sacramento, where he was successful in running down Arthur Sullivan, a ticket thief who had been at large since last August. Sullivan was night ticket agent at Winnemucca, on the Salt Lake division of the Southern Pacific railroad, up till last August when he left the service of the company. Soon after his departure it was discovered that eight interlined tickets, good anywhere in the country, and two $50 scrip books were missing, and for many months the officers of the company were at a learning. and for many months the officers of the company were at a loss to account for their disappearance. Officer Jones worked on the case and finally located Sullivan clerking in a retail store in Sacramento, where he confronted him with the evidence he had procured and secured a confession for Sallivan S secured a confession from Sullivan secured a confession from Sullivan that he stole the tickets and scrip books.

The scrip had been used on the railroad, but the identification slips had been signed by C. S. Baker. Officer Jones followed his clue and by comparing the handwriting on the slips with that of the former night agent he was able to make his case. Sullivan had traveled extensively with the scrip, making trips back and forth between Sacramento, San Francisco and Los Angeles. He was arrested on the charge of embezzlement and taken to Winnemucca, where his examination will be held tomorrow.

Chief Jones was on his return from Los Angeles when he made the arrest. He had been appointed as one of a committee of five to arrange for holding the annual convention of special agents of the United States and Canada to be held at Los Angeles next May. After completing the work for the convention he stopped off at Sacramento to look further into the ticket theft, with the result that he located the perpetrator in a local store. Mr. Jones leaves for Winnemucca to be present at Sullvan's examination tomorrow.
